"Improving leadership development by integrating sustainability into company's mission"

"Purpose of the research seminar is to discuss implications of integrating sustainability into company's mission for leadership development efforts by using case-based research method. We introduce sustainable leadership approach, identify components of sustainable leadership development and examine how the incorporation of sustainability value influences leadership development. Study upgrades existing theory by considering the process how integration of sustainability into mission changes leadership development process. Study incorporates a wider range of leader's influence, including care for individual, organizational, social and natural well-being, therefore presenting an alternative to majority of prior studies that focused on a more limited influence of the leader, whereas this study presents the sustainable leadership development based on symbiotic capital."
