Author: prof. dr. Ana Paula Serra, Faculty of Economics (FEP), University of Porto

will present the article:

“Are rankings of financial analysts useful to investors?”

“Several institutions issue rankings of financial analysts based on the accuracy of their price and EPS forecasts. Given that these rankings are ex post they may not be useful to investors. In this paper we show that trading strategies based on perfect foresight and on past rankings outperform a passive strategy. In addition, we report that investors are better off following analysts that issue accurate price targets rather than following those with accurate EPS forecasts.”
